Australian politician For the Australian cricketer, see William Carlton (cricketer). Bill CarltonPersonal detailsBorn(1894-05-02)2 May 1894Newcastle, New South WalesDied30 January 1949(1949-01-30) (aged 54)Concord, New South WalesPolitical partyLabor Party, Australian Labor Party (NSW) William Joseph Carlton (2 May 1894 – 30 January 1949) was an Australian politician and a member of the New South Wales Legislative Assembly between 1935 and his death. He was a member of the Australian Labor Party (NSW) and Labor Party. Early life Carlton was born in Newcastle, New South Wales and was the son of a waterside worker. He was educated to elementary level and was employed by the New South Wales Government Railways as a boilermaker's assistant. He became an organizer for the Australian Railways Union. During World War One, Carlton served as a private in a machine-gun company of the First Australian Imperial Force. Carlton was elected as an alderman of Glebe Municipal Council between 1929 and 1935.[1] State Parliament Carlton was elected to parliament as the Lang Labor member for the safe Labor seat of Glebe at the 1935 state election. [2] He replaced the incumbent Lang Labor member Tom Keegan who had retired. The following year Lang's party and its Members of Parliament, including Carlton, were readmitted into the Labor Party. At the next election in 1938, Carlton faced a strong challenge from Horace Foley, the candidate for Robert Heffron's breakaway Industrial Labor Party, which Carlton won by less than 2% of the vote.[3][4] Glebe was abolished by a redistribution at the 1941 and Carlton won Labor endorsement for the marginal seat of Concord. In Labor's landslide victory at that election, Carlton defeated the sitting incumbent United Australia Party member Stan Lloyd. Carlton retained the seat for Labor until his death in January 1949.[5][6] He was the Labor Party whip between 1941 and 1947 but did not hold any other party, parliamentary of ministerial office.[1] References ^ a b "Mr William Joseph Carlton (1894 - 1949)". When the average person thinks about building a clean daily driver for their spouse they might set aside a timeframe varying from maybe six months to a year. And it almost certainly would not be as extensive pun intended as a full show truck. Well, Bill Carlton is not the average person and his shop, Ekstensive Metalworks, has a long track record of doing the extraordinary. Since the average SUV would not do the job for Bill already having body-dropped an Escalade, Hummer, and countless other badass rideshe decided to pick up a Cadillac SRX and had small plans to make it a cool driver for his wife, Jennifer. Well, the plans certainly changed from just tinkering with the SRX over a few months to making it an all-out custom overnight. The long and short of it took place in the local Wal-Mart parking lot. Jennifer, back-up sensors and all, was backing out and those annoying little sensors were getting louder, but she still thought she had plenty of room. Apparently, the huge grille guard everything's bigger in Texas on the truck behind her was being picked up by the sensors, but not by her, so she backed right into the truck, smashing the rear of the SRX. All this took place a little more than two weeks before SEMA 'Straight out of an Overhaulin' episode, Bill and his crew tore the whole truck apart, repainted it, and debuted it two weeks later during a surprise visit to SEMA without Jennifer even knowing it was out of the body shop! Yup, 'bagged, painted, interior, and wheels -- ready for SEMA, all in two weeks. So you probably think the story ends there, but that's not Bill's style. Even that would be too easy. So Bill hooked up with a buddy by the name of Dante and got cracking. Dante and his brother stayed at the shop four days straight with nothing but a pile of boxes to keep them company! Needless to say, with the help of Dante and the Ekstensive crew the two-week miracle was turned around yet again. And after coming through big time for Bill, Dante is now a permanent part of the Ekstensive family. So there it is, the long and short of it. Without question, that freak of nature would send fear into the hearts of everything in its path. In the world of custom trucks, there is an unspoken hierarchy where builders who have been creating works of art for decades have developed abilities to fabricate one-off trucks we as bolt-on customizers see as freaks of nature. Get ready, here comes a freak. Starting with a Chevy Suburban he picked up at an auto auction, the Ekstensive crew, along with Tim Donelson owner of Color Blind, started by unbolting the body from the frame and setting the body on a jig. After taking several measurements and using tape to create new body shapes, a Sawzall and plasma cutter made short work of the cuts. Tacked together, with 26 total inches removed, the new body looked insane as the team basically created a two-door Tahoe that Chevrolet never envisioned. A freak indeed. Bill plans on making the side one-piece glass like the older two-door Tahoes and using the factory front doors, albeit with a heavily modified B-pillar for strength and good looks. The 5. When done up or even left beaten and abused from years of labor they stand tall as proud relics of the rock-solid American work ethic. Arjonas upholstery wrapped the factory bench in king ranch genuine leather, and even went as far as wrapping the dash and raceline steering wheel in the same hide. Though the exterior of the F appears to be stock with all of the original trim and emblems, it was all airbrushed and buried under Clearcoat. Sleeker, longer lines ruled the road across the board, but as the years have passed, it seems like there are only a few vintage Ford and Dodge pickups that are fully restored and customized for every 20 GM trucks that pop up. The same values apply to the C equation, but with so many of them on the road, at shows and in magazines, nonconforming truck builders are looking to other makes and models to resurrect, leveling the playing field a bit and standing out from the sea of Cs. The dakota digital vhx instrument bezel updates the look of the gauges while keeping the original styling cues of this classic truck. After tearing into it, there was nothing but setback uncovered. Rust, man, it sucks, and there was enough of it to stop this project dead in its tracks before it even had a chance to begin. It was the inspiration behind the entire project, actually. Julio resumed his hunt for another possible cadaver that would be a little less sketchy to work with. This helped me tremendously to stay on course and not lose sight of the goal. Of course, he nailed it. Pat Maxwell has airbrushed the metal to give it a wood grain effect that looks just like the real thing. I immediately ordered the wheels, bought the big brake kit and the Coyote crate engine, of course. That was the major driving force behind the idea for this project, so that had to be done first. This was all happening at the beginning of August, and Julio still wanted to make it to SEMA in early November with this project; maybe doable, yet maybe too lofty a goal to set with just three months to get everything done. As the suspension fab got underway, Julio quickly discovered there would be no time to get this truck done in the abbreviated timespan he had given himself. Sure, he was bummed for a bit, but then realized he now had an unlimited amount of unpressured time to do all of the things he wanted to their fullest potential. He was able to have the entire frame and suspension components powder-coated thanks to the time extension. He had time to shop for painters who had the skills and style he was after, and all of this was done with a lighter, cooler mindset. Things were looking up for Julio, and his truck was getting nothing but the utmost attention from the hands he trusted and admired most. The unique engine swap, the overall execution of fit and finish, those big, deep-lipped billets that have become a Texas trademark—it all comes together for the makings of a true trophy-snagger. The show airs Tuesdays at 9 p. Houston is home to some of the best custom cars in the nation, and the city is finally getting the credit it deserves, according to the star of a new Velocity reality show called "Texas Metal. On the show, Bill Carlton and the crew at Ekstensive Metal Works take ordinary cars and trucks and turn them into works of art, with Houston flavor and big reveals at the end. Carlton, who grew up on the property where Ekstensive operates, said being on the show is a dream come true for a third-generation welder like himself. Artist turns car accessory ideas into hilarious drawings. Carlton's dad bought the property off Sunny Drive in and later opened a small shop selling steel and welding supplies. While working in the family business after high school, Carlton started modifying vehicles for fun, working on friends' cars until he decided to turn it into an official business in When a friend of a friend heard that Velocity was looking for a Houston body shop to feature in a new show, Carlton and his crew stepped up to the challenge. The show premiered on Velocity on Nov. The show features Ekstensive's real customers, although it's probably not customary to do final reveals on a barge in the Houston Ship Channel, as in the show's second episode. Carlton lives in Spring with Jennifer, his wife of 19 years, and his children, Keegan, 15, Presley, 13, and Corbin, 5.
